

“Stations of Water”: an art exhibition modelled on the liturgy of the Stations of the Cross is due to open in St Paul’s Cathedral on Saturday to raise awareness of the international campaign Just Water. The paintings, sculptures, videos, and sound and light installations were created by ten alumni of Chelsea College of Art in London, including the director of the exhibition, the Revd Regan O’Callaghan, originally from Taupo, New Zealand, who has worked on projects at the cathedral since 2007. www.justwater2017.org/about-us/
